Just like a companion is someone who is close to you and you benefit from each other, so do plants benefit from one another.

But how do you know which plants will work well together in the garden? Which ones will attract or repel insects?

This talk covers the history, benefits, implementation details, and the impact of plants on the insect populations present in your garden, both beneficials and pests.

Marsha Hobbs Smith, a Master Gardener volunteer at MBG's Kemper Center Plant Doctor desk, will share intriguing details on how the plants in your garden determine what insects, beneficial or pest, are populating your garden.
