No matter how much you love to garden sometimes you need to consider making the task easier. In this class you will learn how to subtract plants that don't perform; how to do more with shrubs and less with annuals; how to find plants that give color but don't have to be deadheaded; and give yourself permission to "pitch" those plants that need too much work..

Less is more when you make the right choices and subtract the problem choices.

Terry Milne is a former Adjunct Instructor, Horticulture, STLCC Meramec, where she taught landscape design. She has also taught landscape design for the St. Louis Master Gardener training classes and gives frequent programs for the Missouri Botanical Garden Adult Education. She has been a Master Gardener since 2001. Terry is a passionate iris gardener and gives guided tours of the MBG iris collection for the Master Gardener Speakers Bureau.
